

Ken Buch

Ken Buch is an executive coach, organization development consultant, and facilitator with over 30 years of experience working in private, nonprofit, and government sectors.

Ken brings knowledge and experience from the fields of neuroscience and leadership to support the coaching process in a collaborative way that differentiates his approach to coaching leaders through complex challenges. As a client and partner, you will gain insights from a greater understanding of how your basic brain functionality can potentially compromise your effectiveness or enhance it if appropriately directed. The synthesis of learning from the hard science, empirical data, research, and breakthroughs in the field of neuroscience enable Ken to draw from and offer a level of expertise that will help you understand your drivers, rewards, behaviors, and threats to identify and implement sound and practical strategies to achieve the success you desire.

Ken has worked with more than 250 leaders in over 35 organizations and agencies as an executive coach. The breadth of clients include Senior Executive Service from the Navy International Program Office (NIPO), Department of Homeland Security- National Protection and Programs Directorate (NPPD), DOT- Federal Aviation Administration, the United States Postal Service and US Postal Inspection Service, Department of Energy, Securities Exchange Commission and Custom Border Protection.

Ken holds the following credentials:

- A certificate in Leadership Coaching from Georgetown University;
- A professional coach certification (PCC) credential with the International Coach Federation.
- A Master of Science from Johns Hopkins University in Organization Development;
- A certificate as a Fellow in the Management of Change.
- A Post Graduate Certificate in the Neuroscience of Leadership from Middlesex University in London, UK.